

Study Abroad Scholarships

Study abroad is more affordable than you think. USC financial aid may be applied to the cost of a USC-approved semester or year-long study abroad program. Maymesters can also qualify for financial aid.

There are many study abroad scholarships. Application deadlines may be as much as a year in advance of travel. Thus, it is important to research and apply early! USC Thornton International can offer guidance.

Tuition Assistance Benefit (TAB) & Study Abroad:

TAB is a tuition assistance benefit for students of a family member employed at USC. TAB may be applied to the tuition costs on a USC-approved study abroad program.

USC Scholarships:

USC Africa Student Fund

The USC Africa Student Fund is an endowment to support undergraduate student travel to African countries for study, research, service-based learning and internships. Applications are welcome every October for travel during the following year. Applicants must have at least a 3.5 cumulative GPA to qualify. Find more information here.

Merit Scholars - Exceptional Funding

Presidential, Trustee, Mork or Stamps merit scholars may apply for exceptional funding to apply towards the cost of study abroad.

USC Study Abroad Grants

Open to USC undergraduate students with financial aid who participate in a USC-approved study abroad program. The grant is intended to assist with additional expenses associated with study abroad (e.g., vaccinations, plane tickets, passport fees). Students must have completed the financial aid application process and must be admitted to a USC study abroad program for a full semester or year. Recipients may request to receive funding earlier than the university's normal disbursement schedule to cover upfront study abroad costs.

Awarded twice a year.
